Langston Hughes Cultural Center Explores "The 90s".

The Langston Hughes Community Library & Cultural Center is having its literature series program entitled "New American Writers of The 90's." "New American Writers of the 90's" presents an extraordinary panorama of literary accomplishments in prose and poetry in two distinct presentations: "Multi-cultural Works" on Saturday, October 21, 7:00 p.m. and "The Search For New Meaning," on Saturday, November 18, 7:00 p.m.

The Langston Hughes Library has and continues to be an integral part of the community. Since 1969, the Library has promoted the creation, publication and distribution of important writing. The literature program was developed to expand an awareness in the community by presenting the works of both well-known and emerging, artist, both locally and nationally.

"New Americana Writers of the 90's" will not only feature writers from the community, but writers will come as far as Howard University and Passaic Community College in New Jersey to participate.

Ms. Gabrielle David, the Literature Series Coordinator of the Cultural Center would like the community to become more actively involved in the literature series program. For further information, call (718) 651-6258.
